“The American Cancer Society gave me back my voice.”

I'm an actor. My name is Bill Gargan. Twelve years ago I had cancer of the throat. It was either my voice or my life. Or so I thought when they operated and removed my voice box. No voice box. No voice. This meant I had to learn a new way of talking.

The ACS sponsors classes where they teach laryngectomy patients, like me, to talk again. Those classes meant everything to me.

Until then I never knew that ACS helps to rehabilitate people who have been treated for cancer.

Or that they help support life-saving research.

Or that they help to keep the medical profession aware of all the latest developments in diagnosis and treatment. And inform the public about the importance of regular checkups and other life-saving actions.

But the truth is they can't help anyone without some help from you.

Give. Your dollars make the difference.

We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime.

American Cancer Society.
