An American Cancer Society Film for the Nursing Profession

This short, effective film, one of a series produced by the American Cancer Society for nurses...

- demonstrates how the nurse—through her special skills and understanding—can reduce pain and loss of life in the post-operative period and can help breast cancer patients deal with emotional trauma and physical complications;
- shows how the nature and extent of surgery vary with the extent of the disease and describes improvements in detection and treatment of breast cancer;
- explains pre- and post-surgical nursing procedures and emphasizes the need for alertness to possible shock and infection;
- discusses the possible side effects of radiation therapy, chemotherapy, and hormone therapy for disseminated disease and reviews measures to control these;
- stresses the role of the nurse in providing emotional support for the breast cancer patient;
- depicts nurses encouraging patients to exercise and introducing them to prostheses to promote rehabilitation.

This 22-minute, color and sound film is available in 16mm reels, 8mm cartridges, and ¾-inch U-Matic videocassettes from your local Division of the American Cancer Society. This and other professional education motion pictures are available to health professionals on free loan or for 5-year lease.
